

The Blurting Practice Guide

For Stoday Plus Learners

How to Master Active Recall in 5 Minutes or Less

What Is Blurting?

Blurting is when you close your notes and dump everything you can remember about a topic onto the page (or screen). No checking. No re-reading. Just you and your brain.

It's the fastest way to find out what you actually know — and what your brain is pretending you know.

Why Does It Work?

Because blurting taps into:

-  Active Recall — pulling out knowledge boosts long-term memory
-  Metacognition — shows you what's strong vs weak
-  Low-friction studying — short sessions = consistent wins

And when done right, it fits seamlessly into your Spaced Repetition Plan — especially after you've passively skimmed or highlighted.

The Two Blurting Modes

1. Physical Blurting (Recommended)

Use the Minimalist Blurting Sheet template. You'll:

- Write by hand = more memory muscle
- Reduce distractions
- Store sheets for spaced review

2. Online Blurting (Effortless)

Use your Stoday Plus Notion Blurting Zone.

Features:

- Pre-set Pomodoro timer (5 min)

- Structured input zones:
 - “What I remember”
 - “What I will remember”
 - Reflection zone + emoji confidence score

How to Blurt (Step-by-Step)

1. Pick a Topic
Choose something you’ve recently reviewed.
 2. Set a Timer (5 mins)
Use the Notion timer or your own.
 3. Blurt Freely
 - Write EVERYTHING you remember
 - Bullet points, phrases, diagrams, keywords — whatever comes out
 - Don’t check notes until the end
 4. Take a Short Break
(1–2 minutes)
 5. Review & Reflect
 - What was missing?
 - What was accurate?
 - Fill in the “What I will remember” zone
 6. Rate Your Confidence
Use    or 1–3 system.

When to Blurt (Spaced Repetition Style)

Passive recall to be used within the first 7 days (1-3-7).

Blurting starts on day 7, day 14, day 28,... (until you’re at 10/10 level then revise once monthly)

Pair it with your other methods (flashcards, Feynman, mind maps) for full retention.

Pro Tips for Blurting

- Don't overthink what you write
 - Keep your blurting zone clean and minimal
 - Use different pen colours or bold fonts for fun
 - Be consistent — 1–2 blurts per study day is enough

Mistakes to Avoid

-  Looking at notes while blurting
 -  Writing too “pretty” — it's not an essay
 -  Skipping review step
 -  Doing it once and never again

The Blurting Formula

 Passive Review →  Blurt →  Reflect →  Repeat = Retention
