

Target Audience Avatar — Stoday Plus

Primary Avatar: "The Ambitious International Applicant"

Who They Are

Age	16-19 (Year 12-13 equivalent, or gap year)
Location	Vietnam, Malaysia, Singapore, Hong Kong, Indonesia, India – applying to UK
Background	Strong academic achiever in their home country, top of local school but not nationally elite
Income (family)	Middle to upper-middle class – parents can afford UK tuition but are not wealthy
Language	English as second language, competent but not native
Tech habits	Heavy phone user, uses TikTok, YouTube, Discord, Reddit, Google

What They Want

- A place at a respected UK university (Russell Group is the dream, any good UK uni is acceptable)
- To not embarrass their family — there's real social pressure back home
- To feel in control of a process that feels foreign and overwhelming
- To stand out on their application despite not being from a UK school
- Someone who gets it — who's been through the same confusion they're in

Their Daily Reality

- Drowning in information — UCAS website is confusing, deadlines are scattered everywhere
- Doesn't know what a personal statement should sound like as a non-UK student
- Scared of missing a deadline and losing their chance for the whole year
- Possibly doing A-Levels or IB at an international school, or local curriculum
- Parents are asking "how is the application going?" but they barely understand the process themselves
- Friends aren't applying to UK — feels alone in the process

Pain Points (What Keeps Them Up at Night)

1. "I don't know what deadline I'm supposed to hit next" — UCAS has multiple, and they vary by course and university

2. "My personal statement sounds wrong but I don't know why" — they can write in English but don't know what UK admissions tutors want to see
3. "I don't know if my grades are good enough" — conversion from local grading systems to UK equivalents is confusing
4. "I might apply to the wrong universities" — don't know which ones are realistic vs stretch vs safe
5. "I'm falling behind on revision AND the application" — two overwhelming tasks at the same time

What They've Already Tried

- Googling "how to apply to UK university" → got official UCAS pages that are still confusing
- Watching YouTube videos → generic, not international-student specific
- Asking their school counsellor → limited UK knowledge, gives vague advice
- Reddit (r/6thForm, r/UniUK) → helpful but they feel like outsiders in the conversation
- Facebook groups for international students → noisy, unstructured, untrustworthy advice

Why They'd Pay for Your Product

- It saves time — one place for deadlines, revision, and planning instead of 5 different tabs
- It reduces anxiety — knowing exactly what's next removes the "am I forgetting something?" feeling
- The price is accessible — £5-10/month is pocket money compared to what their family is spending on tuition
- It's built by someone who did it — not a corporate service, a real person who went through the same thing

Why They Might NOT Buy (Objections)

Objection	How to overcome
"I can use Google Calendar for free"	Show them the time they'd waste manually entering every UCAS deadline + revision scheduling
"I don't trust a random website"	Show your face, your story, your university offers — proof you did it
"My parents control my spending"	Price low enough they don't need to ask. Make a free trial or free tier
"I'll figure it out myself"	Let them — then be there when they realise they can't

Where to Find Them

Platform	What they're searching
Reddit	r/6thForm, r/UniUK, r/UCAS, r/IPStudents
TikTok	"UK university application tips", "UCAS explained", "study with me UK"
YouTube	"how to write a personal statement", "UCAS guide for international students"
Facebook	International student groups, country-specific UK applicant groups
Discord	University-specific servers, study servers

Secondary Avatar: "The Anxious Parent"

- Age 40-55, based in SEA
- Paying for everything but understanding nothing
- Wants reassurance their child is on track
- Would pay for a tool just to see a dashboard showing their kid isn't missing deadlines
- Reached through Facebook, WhatsApp groups for parents of international students

One-Sentence Avatar Summary

■ A 17-year-old from Vietnam (or Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia) who is academically capable, deeply motivated, but quietly terrified of missing a deadline or writing the wrong thing — and will pay £5-10/month for the feeling of being in control of their UK application.

That's your person. Every feature you build, every Reddit post you write, every TikTok you make — speak directly to that fear of missing a deadline and that feeling of being an outsider in a process designed for UK students.

⇒ Products You Can Sell to This Avatar

Category 1 — The Core Tool (Web App)

What you're already planning to build:

- Customizable revision tracker — subjects, topics, progress bars
- Live UCAS deadline calendar — auto-updated, personalised by their course choices
- Application checklist — personal statement, references, university choices, submission

This is your main product. Everything else wraps around it.

Category 2 — Digital Resources (Low effort to make, high perceived value)

Product	What it is	Time to make
Personal statement guide	Step-by-step framework for international students, with examples	2-3 days
University shortlist calculator	"Based on your grades + subject, here are realistic/reach/safe unis"	Can be a simple interactive page
Grade conversion cheat sheet	Vietnamese/Malaysian/IB/A-Level → UCAS points explained	1 day
Interview prep question bank	Common UK university interview questions + how to answer	2 days
"Week by week" application timeline	Month-by-month guide from Year 12 to offer day	1 day

Category 3 — Service (Your time, higher price)

Product	What it is	Price
Personal statement review	They submit a draft, you give written feedback within 48hrs	£30-50 per review
1:1 strategy call	30-45 min video call – which unis, which course, their situation	£40-70 per call

These are optional — only add them once you have traction. They don't scale but they generate cash and testimonials fast.

Pricing Structure — Bundle vs Split?

Bundle. Always bundle for this avatar.

Here's why splitting doesn't work for a 17-year-old:

- Decision fatigue kills conversions — "which plan do I need?" → they leave
- They don't know what they need yet — a bundle removes that question
- Low price point means there's no reason to gate features

Recommended Model: Free + One Paid Tier

Free (Lead Magnet)

- UCAS deadline calendar only — view-only, no customisation
- No account needed, just visit the site
- Purpose: Get them in the door, show them the tool works

Pro — £6-8/month (or £49-59/year)

Everything:

- Full customizable revision tracker
- Personalised UCAS calendar (based on their university choices)
- All digital guides (personal statement, grade conversion, timeline)
- University shortlist tool

- Priority email support

Add-ons (Optional, One-Time)

- Personal statement review: £35
- 1:1 strategy call: £55

Why This Structure Works

Reason	Detail
Free tier removes risk	They try before they buy – huge for an unknown brand with 0 reputation
One paid tier removes confusion	No "which plan is right for me?" paralysis
Annual option increases LTV	£59/year vs $£8 \times 12 = £96$ – they save money, you get cash upfront
Add-ons don't cannibalize	Students who want more pay more, others stay on Pro
£6-8 is below "ask parents" threshold	They pay themselves, no friction

What to Build First (Priority Order)

1. UCAS calendar (free) – your lead magnet and proof of concept
2. Revision tracker (Pro) – core sticky feature
3. Personal statement guide (Pro) – highest perceived value resource
4. Grade conversion + shortlist tool (Pro) – quick to build, high utility

Everything else comes after you have paying users.

Want me to now draft the Reddit validation post to test if this exact offer resonates before your brother starts building?